

Idaho Academy of Science and Engineering

The Idaho Academy of Science and Engineering (IASE) is a professional organization dedicated to fostering collaboration and communication among Idaho's scientific and engineering communities. We also strive to engage and inspire the next generation of researchers and innovators by working closely with local schools and community organizations throughout the State.

Our members include scientists, engineers, educators, and students from a variety of interests and backgrounds, and the Academy is the only statewide organization in Idaho that embraces all STEM disciplines. We organize regular meetings, symposia, and workshops to provide opportunities for members to share their research and expertise, and to stay up-to-date on the latest developments in their fields. Through these various programs and initiatives, we strive to promote and advance scientific and engineering research, education, and outreach. Additionally, we offer a variety of resources and services to support our members' professional development and growth, including mentorship programs, networking events, and access to funding and grant opportunities.

The Academy is affiliated with the National Association of Academies of Science, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the NASA Idaho Space Grant Consortium, and the Eastern Idaho Engineering Council. Several membership levels are available to individuals and organizations with an interest in scientific and engineering endeavors, and we invite you to join us in our mission.

The IASE is listed by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service as a tax-exempt nonprofit scientific and educational organization under section 501(c)(3), meaning that contributions to Academy programs are tax deductible.

For more information on Academy programs, or to find an IASE contact person in your vicinity, use the Contact Us form on this website.

Thank you for visiting our website!